SIGNIFICANCE OF SYMPOSIUM

We as Indians, take pride in our strong cultural heritage. Concepts like environment protection, ecology and conservation are not at all new. They have become as old as the Vedas and the Puranas. The five elements of nature: air, water, soil, sunlight (or fire) and the space, that all of us require to accommodate ourselves together, make it possible to sustain life on this earth. In India, the pancha bhoota, the five mega elements, has been an object of worship from time immemorial. For example, jal (water) in the form of rivers are usually believed be sign of goddesses. Even though, traditionally we are having this much of consideration about nature, due to uncontrolled population growth related increase of urbanization, industrial development and anthropogenic activities, deteriorate our environment continuously. Now a days, the environment pollution is the prime sources for most of the incurable diseases and disorders in human being. Hence, at the present time, the protection of environment from health hazard pollutants to restore the quality of environmental media is one of the most urgent problems facing mankind.

Aim of the Symposium

The aim of the symposium is to asses the present status of environmental pollution in India and its related public health problems, sensitize the students and spread awareness among them

It will also serve as a platform for the participants to interact with the academicians, researchers and health professionals. It is an attempt to build the capacity for making educated decisions on issues concerning environment and health impacts in our surroundings.
